Peter Thomson authored the article "Taylor v. United States" for The Federalist Society. The article examines whether the government has to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the interstate commerce element in a Hobbs Act prosecution of a defendant who robs a drug trafficker or whether the government may simply rely on proof that the person robbed was dealing in drugs which is an inherent economic enterprise that satisfies, as a matter of law, the interstate commerce element set forth in the statute. A copy of the article can be found here.
